setting up of steel plant of 12 million tonnes capacity. For a steel of this capacity the iron-ore requirement for 30 years will be 576 million tonnes. As such the total requirement for the two foreign companies would be around 1.2 billion tonnes. Against this, Indian Bureau of Mines under United Nation Framework Classification has estimated the iron-ore reserve of the country to. be around 22 billion tonnes as on 1.4.2000. In view of this it is not anticipated that allocation of iron-ore to foreign steel companies in the country will be detrimental to the growth of steel industry in India.

(c) and (c) Iron-ore reserves are allocated as per the provisions of National Mineral Policy, 1993, Mines & Mineral Development Regulation Act, 1957 and Mineral Concession Rule, 1960 and Policies adopted by State Governments in this regard. There is no separate policy for allocating iron ore reserve to foreign steel companies.
